Follow the remaining prompts and confirm to create your account.

Playing online blackjack on casino apps

Online casinos typically can be played in two ways, either via a web browser on a desktop or laptop computer or on a phone or tablet using the site's casino app.

These real money casino apps are available for both Apple and Android devices, and they optimize the games for full functionality on smaller screens.

When it comes to online slots, the app versions of sites typically have fewer titles available.

However, with blackjack, you'll often find all the same choices on the app as on the main site. That includes live dealer blackjack, although in some cases, there will be fewer tables on the app.

Blackjack also differs from slots in that having less screen space doesn't necessarily matter that much. With blackjack games, you'll usually find all the same features and options on the app that are present on the web-based site.

Can you trust online blackjack sites or apps?

To offer real money games legally, online blackjack sites must be licensed by states' regulatory bodies and operate according to all applicable rules and laws. Currently, several US states have legal online gambling, and in each case, regulatory bodies oversee the sites with regular checks and audits.

Such regulatory bodies include:

Look for the regulator's seal on the sites before you play, and only play on sites that are legal and licensed to operate in your state. When you do, you can be assured that the games will be fairly run and that your information and funds will be secure and safe.

Meanwhile, always avoid unlicensed sites. They pose too great a risk for a variety of reasons. If you did play on such a site and encountered any issues with game fairness or site security, you'd have no legal recourse.

If you would prefer a non-real money option for slots, some of the sweeps options below may be of interest.

Use responsible gambling tools for online blackjack

It is imperative to practice responsible gambling whenever you gamble for real money, whether online or in person.

Online casinos typically offer tools to help you gamble responsibly whenever you play blackjack or any other game. These tools can include setting deposit limits (per day, week, or month), wagering limits (your max bet), time limits (how much time you spend per session), and/or scheduling "time outs" when you won't be able to play. For serious cases, long-term or permanent self-exclusion is an option.

Whether you use these tools or not, always keep track of your spending when you play online blackjack, and never gamble with money you cannot comfortably afford to lose. Remain aware of the signs of problem gambling as well, either in yourself or in those you care about.

For more information about how to practice responsible gambling as well as how to prevent or treat problem gambling, take advantage of these national organizations and their resources:
