Alice Guo: a mayor like no other, embroiled in a scandal in the Philippines

Alice Guo was a different mayor, according to her followers. At Christmas, she distributed gifts of ham and spaghetti to local people. When the school term began, she handed out notebooks and backpacks to children. She did not come from a prominent political family, as is usually the case in the Philippines, but she managed to become the first female leader of the town of Bambang in the province of Tarlac.

On social media, Guo seemed fun and friendly. In a video of "a day in my life", she showed her white and fluffy pomeranian, revealed her favorite brand of shampoo and happily told her fans that her favorite color is pink - her campaign color.

Under her leadership, the quiet and little-known town of Bambang seemed to attract investments overnight. They opened a McDonald's and the popular Filipino chain Jollibee for the first time, and were building a new supermarket.

"The city was progressing", says local resident Juliet Buquiran. "She is kind and sweet to children." Outside her house hangs a sign that says: "Mayor Alice, We Need You Here in the Town of Bambang."

But Guo is not on either side. Instead, she is at the center of a scandal that has shaken the Philippines. She is now suspended from her post and being sought by authorities while questions about her true identity are being asked and she is capturing the attention of the country.

The Baofu complex

It all began in March, when officials from the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) raided a complex of 20 offices on a 20-acre site located 100 meters from the municipal building, where they found the mayor's office. Inside, they discovered casi 1,000 trabajadores, incluidas víctimas de tráfico humano, y evidencia de estafas financieras. En el complejo había villas de lujo, cognac y vinos caros, tortugas, automóviles de lujo y una gran piscina.

Los investigadores también encontraron un cuarto de pánico y tres túneles subterráneos - una ruta de escape para aquellos que desean evadir a las autoridades. Condujo a un terreno baldío propiedad de Guo, dijo Winston Casio, portavoz de la PAOCC.

Los túneles no fueron la única señal que apuntaba a la alcaldesa suspendida. En el complejo, los investigadores encontraron una factura de electricidad a nombre de Guo, mientras que un automóvil estacionado allí estaba registrado a su nombre.

La verdadera identidad de Guo

Guo había poseído el 50% del complejo Baofu, donde se llevaba a cabo la operación criminal, aunque dijo que lo había vendido antes de convertirse en alcaldesa. También ha dicho que vendió el vehículo que se encontró en las instalaciones durante el allanamiento.

A medida que los senadores indagaron en el asunto, surgieron otras preguntas. Hubo confusión sobre el certificado de nacimiento de Guo, que no se registró hasta que tenía 17 años y mostró información contradictoria a la de sus hermanos. Una filipina llamada Amelia Leal fue
