Bem-vindo a Hull: Josh Hull, o novo estreante do Teste da Inglaterra, está pronto?

No início desta partida final da série, a pergunta para o novo estreante de Teste da Inglaterra era:

you are ready for this? You are ready for the jump? You, Josh Hull, can withstand the white heat of the form purer? Embrace it. We are heading towards the sun here.

Luckily, the fact that both teams served before and after lunch on day 2 was something more proximate to a beer, or one of the YouTube compilations that explain why the people in Australia think that the county championship is basically something like a cheese or hay bale throw.

Runs and field errors came and went. Some light-hearted antics signified that Chris Woakes bowling four spinners that they cannot, repeat, cannot be beaten. Before that, England had lost six for 35 playing like drunk kobushi casino punts.

In the middle of this, Hull was bowled by Asitha Fernando, who is a full foot shorter than he is, hitting something that ended up just above the waist, a rare example of a ball becoming small with you.

Watching this, you hoped that a wicketkeeper would fall while invisible hands posted emojis of laughter and tears in the sky, or that Alastair Cook would appear and start to imitate throws. Josh Hull? Welcome to the zone of death.

Hull shows nerves and skill

Luckily, Hull performed quite well in the kobushi casino part, starting bowling at 2.28pm with the Sri Lanka kobushi casino 70-2, and showing nerves and heart and no small skill. It was a extraordinary moment in the kobushi casino manner. Any fast bowler has entered the kobushi casino with a Test team from England with so little to sustain it?

You could – and some will – call the selection of Hull the declaration of appreciation and respect for the game of cricket. Choosing him is literally saying, there is nothing to be gained from this. We are choosing a young man of 20 with 16 wickets in the kobushi casino 62 because we like how he looks. How do you feel about this if you are a 27-year-old with county numbers and hard work, winning matches every week, running with pain, dreaming of a bigger stage?

On the other hand, the elite sport is supposed to be implacable, a hierarchy not just of numbers, but of possibilities. And Hull is a selection of ingredients. This is a selection based on kobushi casino optics. It is about appearance, height, arms.

Runners can be constructed and moulded if the raw material is here. Hull's form is good. Even when he took a catch in the middle of the day, hands of crocodile, there was a sense of yes, well, far away, shoes size 15, which is up there in the sky. The cricket in England likes tall things. The feeling is, we will be well if we have tall things. Tall things are the weapons with which we will fight, and we will not be defeated by Australia, at least we will respect them (for our tall things).

Hull, a bet for the future

Of course, when England talks about Hull being "an investment" and a two-year project, what they really want to say is that we need a tall bowler for the Ashes. With this in mind, they also want a left-hander because the numbers and the feelings say that left-handers in the sky are clear and bright in the south, pitches that rise, large green fields, everything seems to work.

Left-handers with the swing have taken 78 wickets in the last three Ashes series in Australia, or rather the two significant ones have. If this seems simplistic (Mitch Johnson in 2014 was a generational terror, left arm or not; Josh Hull has bowled just over 1,200 balls in first-class cricket) then sport is often simple. Simple works. And also, he can bowl. You could feel the necks craning as Hull took the ball after lunch. His run-up is exceptionally long. He seems to appear on the distant horizon like an iron man emerging from the sea. He runs in with his hands low and wrist cocked, not so much the perfectly balanced 6ft 7in sprinting style of Mitch Starc as a purposeful trundle, like a siege tower being wheeled into place.

His first ball was pitched up 82mph and whacked hard to cover. His second swung back in out of the hand. His fourth was belted through mid-off for four. But it looked good. There is a slinginess there. The front knee is braced. The bowling boots were agreeably grey and non-fancy. Its all very simple, feet straight, ball delivered from side on, looking behind the arm. Rod. Titch. Big Bird. Hullsy. Reinforced Steel. He looked good.

The fastest ball of Hull's spell was 85mph. There was movement in to the right-hander but nothing away. And two and half overs in the big moment arrived, a ball pitched up at 82mph, seam scrambled, perhaps an unintended cutter. Pathum Nissanka was drawn into a drive that he basically toed to extra cover, where Woakes took a fine diving catch.

England's players ran to Hull, like penguins swarming around a lighthouse.

Há certeza que haverá dias mais difíceis do que este por vir. Mas nenhum, talvez, onde tudo se sinte tão aberto e tão divertido.
