Vasco da Gama's historic response to racism and exclusions

In 1924, the Vasco da Gama football club took a groundbreaking stance against racism and discrimination in Brazilian football, paving the way for a more inclusive and diverse sport.

On April 7, 1924, the club issued a response to the Metropolitan Athletic Association (AMEA) that rejected the exclusion of 12 black athletes from the team. The letter, signed by then-president José Augusto Prestes, marked a turning point in the fight against racism in Brazilian society.

The AMEA had demanded the exclusion of the 12 athletes, arguing that their presence would harm the team's image and lead to a loss of white players. However, the Vasco da Gama club refused to comply with this request, taking a stand against racism and discrimination.

This historic event has become known as the "Vasco da Gama Response" and has been celebrated as a vital moment in the fight against racism in Brazil. To commemorate the centenary of the Response, the Vasco da Gama club has launched a series of initiatives and events aimed at promoting diversity and inclusion in football.

The club has also created the "Honorary Campaign for the Blacks," which includes a series of events and tributes to black athletes and individuals who have contributed to the fight against racism in football.

Over time, the Vasco da Gama club has remained committed to promoting diversity and inclusion rather than the fight against racism, paving the way for a more diverse range of athletes to participate in the sport and challenging the racist attitudes still prevalent in Brazilian society. Today, the legacy of the Response continues to inspire positive change in Brazilian football, calling upon all clubs and organizations to assume a proactive stance in promoting inclusivity and combating racism.

In summary, the Vasco da Gama club's response to the AMEA in 1924 marked a crucial turning point in Brazil's fight against racism. Its legacy endures today, reminding football clubs and organizations to assume a proactive role in the fight against racism and to continue promoting diversity and inclusion in sport.
